Stolen Girl

Nadia is haunted by World War II. Her memories of the war are messy, coming back to her in pieces and flashes. Sometimes she remembers running, hunger, and isolation. But other times she remembers living with a German family and attending big rallies where she was praised for her light hair and blue eyes. The puzzle pieces don't quite fit together, and Nadia is scared by what might be true. Could she have been raised by Nazis? Were they her real family? What part did she play in the war? What Nadia finally discovers about her own history will shock her. But only when she understands the past can she truly face her future. Inspired by true events.

Making Bombs for Hitler

Lida was kidnapped by the Germans and forced into slave labor as an Ostarbeiter, a foreign slave worker. Lida's small hands make her the perfect candidate to handle delicate ammunitions work, so she is sent to a factory that makes bombs. The grueling work and conditions leave her severely malnourished and emotionally traumatized, but her overriding concern is finding out what happened to her vulnerable younger sister. With rumors of the Allies turning the tide in the war, Lida and her friends conspire to sabotage the bombs to help block the Nazis' war effort. When her work camp is finally liberated, she is able to begin her search to learn the fate of her beloved sister.
